

L.E. Froom to
C. B. Clark

Jan. 10, 1968.

[excerpt]

"You enquire about the Holy Spirit. Yes, McLennon had the idea that it was the totality of the angels. They could be everywhere present. And others have a similar concept with reference to Gabriel. But those are rather few and far between, I believe.

If you have the little book, Evangelism, by Mrs. White, you will find that there are three living persons in the Heavenly Trio, as she puts it, or the Trinity. The Holy Spirit is all the fulness of the Godhead.

Gabriel is a creature -- a created being. There never was a time when God, or the Godhead, or the Trinity, did not exist. We had men in our early days who believed the Holy Spirit was a mere impersonal influence, like gravitation, or electricity. But the Holy Spirit, Mrs. White tells us, is just as definitely a person as is the Father or the Son. They operate in different ways."

[excerpt]